Read the following passage and answer question from 1 – 6

Language is wonderful gift given to man. No animal possesses this gift; but they have their own way of expressing themselves. When a rabbit sees an enemy, it runs away into its hole or burrow. Its tail bobs up and down as it runs. The other rabbits see it and they too run away. They know that there is a danger. When a cobra is angry, it raises its hood and makes itself look fierce. This warns other animals. When a bee has found some food, it goes back to the hive. It cannot tell the other bees where the food is by speaking to them but it does a kind of dance in the air. Some animals say things by making sounds. A dog barks when strangers come near.

The kingdom of books is as vast as the universe, for there is no corner of it which they have left unexplored. There is no dearth of book on any topic, be it as simple as the composition of sodium nitrate or as intricate as the mechanism of a spacecraft. Books report the fruits of our research in various fields of knowledge, and spread our progressive view on matters which are of vital concern to our fellow beings.

In fact, no single product of human labour has been as helpful to the advancement of civilization as books, which are written in all languages of the world and are decoratively placed in bookshelves in our homes and tastefully placed in bookstalls and libraries. If to Keats, works of ancient poets like Homer were realms of good from which he derived much joy as well as inspiration, to the modern lover of books, the labours of all geniuses, including those of Keats, are mines of inestimable intellectual wealth he goes on exploring for the sake of his mental and spiritual advancement.
