1. Read the following passage and answer the questions set below it :

A beggar was excited, not because he would see the King that day, but because he was sure to get something from the generous king. On seeing the King, he shouted his praises. "Who are you ?" asked the King. "I'm your unfortunate subject who hasn't eaten since yesterday !" cried the beggar.

"Have you nothing for your King except a sad story ?" asked the King, putting out his hand. "Give me something." The astonished beggar picked up five grains of rice from his bowl full of rice and laid them on the King's palm. The King drove away. The disappointed beggar cursed the King for his miserliness.

That evening the King sent him a bag of rice. He saw a small piece of gold in it. He emptied the bag, feeling sure that there would be more. There were only five gold pieces, one for each grain of rice he had given the King. If he had given the King all the rice, he would have been a rich man.

Soil is our prime natural and economic resource. Different types of soils are found in India and they differ in composition and structure. Black soils are concentrated in parts of Maharashtra and Gujarat. Parts of Kerala and Tamil Nadu have laterite soils while alluvial soils are found in Uttar Pradesh and Punjab.

Alluvial soils are the largest and the most important soil group of India. Humus, lime and organic matters are present in alluvial soils which makes them highly fertile. Wheat and sugarcane are two crops cultivated mainly in this soil. Its colour is grey and texture is sandy or loamy.

Laterite soil generally lacks fertility and is not suitable for agriculture. But some laterites are suitable for growing plantation crops like rubber and cashewnuts. It is coarse in texture and provides valuable building material. It is red due to high iron oxide content.

Black soil is rich in iron, lime and calcium. It is black in colour and clayey to touch. It is known as Black Cotton Soil because cotton is the most important crop grown in this soil. Sunflower is also grown in this soil.

3. Read the following passage and answer the questions set below it :

People think of poverty as a great evil. It seems to be an accepted belief that if people have plenty of money they will be happy and will get more out of life. However, there is some genuine satisfaction which is obtained from life in the humbler cottages of the poor men rather than in the palaces of the rich. I always pity the sons and daughters of rich men who are attended to by servants. They do not get to face some of the daily struggles of life. I am sad to think that they do not know what they have missed, for it is in facing these daily challenges that strong characters are built.

The home of many a poor man is sometimes free from social envies and jealousies – how loving and united members are, selflessly working to support the family. It is for these reasons that so many strong, eminent, self-reliant men and women have sprung from the ranks of the poor. If you read about the life of these ‘immortals’ who will never be forgotten, you will find that most of them have been born poor.
