Erosion of America's farmland by wind and water has been a problem since settlers first put the prairies and grasslands under the plow in the nineteenth century. By the 1930s, more than 282 million acres of farmland were damaged by erosion. After 40 years of conservation efforts, soil erosion has accelerated due to new demands placed on the land by heavy crop production. In the years ahead, soil erosion and the pollution problems it causes are likely to replace petroleum scarcity as the nation's most critical natural resource problem.

The author has stated in the above passage that soil erosion in America

1. occurs only in areas with no vegetation
2. can become a more serious problem in the future
3. causes humans to place new demands on the land
4. was on the decline before 1930s
