Source/ Case based Questions

5x2=10

(a) Five battles took place—Mudki (December 18, 1845), Ferozshahr (December 21, 1845), Baddowal (January 21, 1846), Aliwal (January 28, 1846) and Sabhraon (February 10, 1846). The Sikhs fought with their usual spirit of courage, chivalry and patriotism and came very close to victory at some decisive moments. But the last minute desertions and treacheries of the Poorbias and Dogras saved the British many a desperate situation and 47 eventually enabled them to claim success after the battle of Sabhraon, The British troops marched upon the Sikh capital, arriving there on February 20. Two days later a portion of the royal citadel was garrisoned by English regiments. A treaty was signed at Lahore on March 9, followed by another on March 11, which secured the British a few more territorial concessions. The British troops were to remain in Lahore till the close of the year. But a fresh treaty (Bhairowal, December 16, 1846) was foisted on the Darbar, extending the British lease up to September 4, 1854 - the day Maharaja Dalip Singh was to attain the age of 16. The resident at Lahore now ruled on behalf of the minor King with "full authority to direct and control all matters in every Department of the State."
